

Figure 1: The architecture of your convolutional neural network. It consists of alternating convolutional layers with ReLU non-linearities and subsampling layers. The feature maps of the final subsampling layer are then fed into the classifier consisting of a fully connected layer with a Tanh non-linearity, followed by the output layer that usually uses softmax activation functions.